Mosque bid fails

Morning Telegraph Reporter

An attempt by Mr. Alay Rasul, Sheffield's community relations officer, to mediate in a dispute over the sale of the Moslem Mosque in Industry Road, Sheffield, has failed, he admitted last night.

A contract for the sale of the mosque has already been signed by four of its trustees, after Mr. Rasul pleaded with them to wait until a senior Moslem priest had arbitrated in the religious issues.

Both sides in the dispute were invited to a meeting in Mr. Rasul's office yesterday, but some of the mosque's trustees, who earlier this week signed a contract of sale, refused to attend the meeting.

The trustees want the sale to go ahead.

Mrs. Ali Hedar, wife of one of the trustees, said last night: "Our solicitors sent a letter to Mr. Rasul saying they no longer wanted him as mediator and we wouldn't attend the meeting."

Although attempts to find a compromise solution had suffered a severe setback, Mr. Rasul said he had not given up hope.

"I am hoping that the people will call a public meeting next week and the whole question can be put before the Pakistani people."

Mrs. Hedar said that the trustees had not decided whether they would attend a public meeting if it was called.
